

WRITERS READ at CONCORDIA

COLM TÓIBÍN

Free Public Reading

Friday, 15 October 2004
de Sève Cinema, 7:30 pm
1400 de Maisonneuve Blvd. West

Irish journalist and novelist Colm Tóibín's latest novel, The Master, about Henry James, has been nominated for the 2004 Man Booker Prize. His first novel, The South, about an Irish artist in Spain, won The Irish Times Literature Prize in 1991. The Heather Blazing won the Encore Award for the best second novel in 1992. Tóibín was previously shortlisted for the Booker Prize for his novel, The Blackwater Lightship, and his works have been translated into eighteen languages. His first play, Beauty in a Broken Place, is now being staged in Dublin by The Abbey Theatre. Tóibín is a former editor of In Dublin and Magill magazines and currently lives in Dublin.

Books will be available for sale and signing.

This event is generously supported by the Faculty of Arts and Science and is presented by the Department of English in collaboration with Concordia's Centre for Canadian Irish Studies and Lower Canada College.

Concordia
UNIVERSITY

Real education for the real world
www.concordia.ca

Montreal, Quebec, Canada